Although the Town and AGHCA did not expect to file a cross-appeal reply brief, see Town/AGHCA Br. 51 n.19, the Tribe’s response/reply brief compels a short rejoinder.

As the Town and AGHCA explained (at 51), they properly filed a notice of cross-appeal solely to preserve their ability to challenge the gaming injunction. A panel of this Court has already decided the merits of that issue, but noticing a cross-appeal leaves open the possibility of asking the en banc court or the Supreme Court to review that decision. See Greenlaw v. United States, 554 U.S. 237, 244 (2008) (“[I]t takes a cross-appeal to justify a remedy in favor of an appellee.”). Without a notice of cross-appeal, if the Town or AGHCA filed a rehearing petition to reconsider the gaming injunction, the Tribe would undoubtedly object. Thus, while the cross-appeal seeks no relief at the panel stage, it is jurisdictionally proper.

Remarkably, the Tribe accuses the Town and AGHCA of filing a cross-appeal “to manufacture additional pages of briefing” through “manipulation of this Court.” Corrected Response/Reply Br. 2, 13. But the Town and AGHCA scrupulously forwent any “additional pages of briefing.” Their principal brief adhered to the ordinary 13,000-word limit, and did not use the 2,300 extra words allowed in cross-appeals. Town/AGHCA Br. 51 n.19; Fed. R. App. P. 28.1(e)(2)(B)(i), 32(a)(7)(B)(i). Hardly a “manipulation.”

If anything, it is the Tribe that has jumped at “additional pages of briefing.” Without a cross-appeal, the Tribe’s reply would have been limited to 6,500 words. See Fed. R. App. P. 32(a)(7)(B)(ii). Because of the cross-appeal, the Tribe was entitled to double that amount (plus its separate, 3,882-word response to an amicus brief)—and it used more than 12,500 of its 13,000 words to address the merits of its principal appeal, not the cross-appeal.

As for the Tribe’s accusation that the Town and AGHCA cross-appealed in order to get the last word (Corrected Response/Reply Br. 2): this reply would not have been necessary at all but for the Tribe’s baseless accusations of “manipulation” and its insistence that the cross-appeal must be dismissed.

CONCLUSION

The Court should not dismiss the cross-appeal. At the panel stage, the Court need not address the cross-appeal at all, and should simply affirm the District Court’s Third Amended Final Judgment for the reasons given in the Town and AGHCA’s Principal and Response Brief.

Respectfully submitted,
